NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (NYT).—The United States is planning to use its most advanced aerial reconnaissance system to monitor the cease-fire in the Middle East.

This system would make it possible for pictures of the Suez Canal zone to be on President Nixon's desk in a matter of minutes after a U-2 plane flew over the disputed area, took photographs on either side of the contested waterway and landed next to a building electronically linked by satellite to the Pentagon.

The transmitting device of the system, known as Compass Link, reportedly is being moved from Southeast Asia to an unspecified base in the Middle East.

The device is a self-contained portable unit that processes the film brought back by a pilot, changes the images into electronic impulses and beams the information to the nearest available

The complete unit—including a small, light building with a dish-shaped antenna on its roof—can be transported anywhere by plane or easily dropped on the deck of a ship.

There is only one Compass Link system and it was understood that Washington believed accurate data from the Middle East more important at the moment than maintenance of the circuit to Southeast Asia, where other surveillance systems are available. Starving the ILO

That hardiest of cold warriors, George Meany of the AFL-CIO has stampeded the United States Senate into a cut-off of funds for the International Labor Organization. The offense of that body, which only last year received the Nobel Peace Prize amid vast acclaim from Meany and his associates. has been to appoint a Russian as one of the ILO's five assistant directors.

The appointment was made by C. Wilfred Jenks of Great Britain, elected three months ago to succeed David A. Morse of the United States as director general Mr. Jenks, who had the support of the AFL-CIO and the entire American delegation, won by a single vote ever a Frenchman backed by Moscow.

Even though the Soviet Union now has at least one representative in the secretariat of every other United Nations agency to which it belongs, American labor has always in the past succeeded in keeping any Russian out of top office in the ILO. The Jenks decision to name Pavel E. Astapenko of Russia sent Meany into orbit after the House had given routine approval to a United States appropriation of $3.7 million to cover its share of the ILO budget for the last half of this year.

With the support of the United States Chamber of Commerce, representing American employers, the labor chief charged that the ILO had become an instrument for transmitting Communist propaganda. He told a House subcommittee that the new assistant director would use his post to "make each and every employee a Communist agent, whether he wants to be or not." The Labor Department interposed no serious objection to this fearmongering, and the State Department's demurrers were so mild as to amount to an endorsement.

The Senate's vote to kill the United States contribution repudiates a two-year commitment to which this country pledged itself when the ILO 1969/70 budget was drafted. Under precedents set by the World Court, the United States could presumably be hauled up for default if it fails to pay.

But any such necessity is unthinkable in a period when the Nixon administration and Congress are jointly dedicated to moving from confrontation to cooperation in relations with the Soviet Union.

Secretary of State Rogers, deeply engaged in the effort to establish Middle East peace and to create a favorable climate for the renewed SALT talks, cannot fail to address to the House-Senate Conference Committee the strongest possible plea for restoration of the ILO funds.

The Senate has done nothing in this instance to advance its claim to a large voice in foreign policy. Its meat-ax treatment of the ILO appropriation is made doubly ludicrous by its simultaneous approval of $401,000 for the useless Subversive Activities Control Board, a body with neither dignity nor function.

Liberation and Women

ceremonies-including peaceful demonstrations, marches and picketing-marking the 50th anniversary of women's suffrage are useful and meaningful. More than a few members of what is called the Women's Lib Movement, as well as many of the better organized groups, have repeatedly made clear that too many American women do not have equal opportunity, that male favoritism is widespread and that anti-feminine prejudice, conscious or unconscious, has created a second-class sex over the centuries.

The one important contribution the movement can make now is to adopt tactics that enlist, rather than enrage, the still ancommitted or unreached. This in no way means that the basic position or philosophy of Women's Lib should be weakened; instead, it means that the power of an argument has nothing to do with the loudness by which it is shouted. Fortunately, many leaders in the movement, from writer Gloria Steinem to Lucy Wilson Benson, president of the League of Women Voters, are trying to spread this message.

Among the complaints voiced by some in the Women's Liberation movement is that many newspapers-The Washington Post included—discriminate against women when they print help wanted ads on the basis of sex. The latest word from the federal courts is that the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission-which holds that employers cannot advertise a preference for one sex

There should be no doubt that the over another unless sex is a true occupational qualification-does not have authority under its statutes to issue enforceable regulations about the use of column headings (men or women) in classified help wanted advertising. While The Washington Post continually examines its advertising policies, it currently lists its classified help ads under three headings: "Help, Men." "Help, Men and Women" and "Help, Women." This has proven to be convenient and effective for both the advertiser and job-seeker.

Beyond the legislative and economic questions, which will be solved as quickly as the courts and the Congress can move, are the emotional and cultural parts of Women's Lib. It should be clear by now that women do not belong exclusively in the home, or the office or any other place. They belong wherever each woman, as an individual; chooses to belong according to her talents and lights. This cultural rule applies to men. Why not women? What is needed is a change in those American organizations. institutions, and prejudiced myths that push m into roles, solely because they are women. Or that push men into arbitrary roles simply because they are men. Or that deny equal opportunity to blacks, or other minorities. The liberation that women are demanding today, if we understand it correctly, is not something that is uniquely denied to women.

International Opinion

Captive Journalists

After the death of two reporters in captivity and the release of three others, the odious blackmail involving the life of 19 journalists continues. The Indochinese Communists still refuse to give news from them. . Five tragic deaths and four releases leave 19 reporters unaccounted for, some for five months. Some of them are accused of an "incorrect attitude" toward the Cambodian "government" in Peking. . .

Let's ask a question: did not René Puissesseau and Raymond Meyer die, as their American and Indian confrères, for having met with seen and filmed NVN forces in Khmer territory? Did not the "incorrect attitude" of some of the survivors consist of refusing to call Cambodian the NVN forces they met? A legal or de facto authority cannot claim to impose a "correct attitude" on the whole world press.

Neither the Nazis nor the Simbas in the Congo ever attempted anything similar. The phenomenon is unprecedented. But the menace probably was also without a precedent: by finding NVN troops where U.S. soldier never set foot, the missing men threatened innocently the very foundation of a construction built on the idea of a "peace camp" defending peoples and "non-interference" through "liberation wars."

Confusing a camera with a submachine gun can explain an incident. It cannot explain that wounded men were left to die without medical treatment or that they were not released to be nursed elsewhere as our diplomacy requested in pressing terms. It does not explain the prolonged detention or the death of 27 reporters.

Agnew's Asian Tour

He has already given the Cambodians an assurance that the withdrawal from South Vietnam would not proceed if Cambodia fell to the Communists. In the long run this must mean that any settlement in Vietnam must be accompanied by a settlement in Cambodia whereby any remaining Vietnamese Communist forces there are withdrawn.

Of course Vietnam remains the touchstone of the withdrawal and self-help policy and it is in Saigon that the balances of assurance for the future and firmness in the present may be hardest to strike, especially at a moment when President Nixon is hoping that Mr. Bruce can get down to some frank and private dealing with the North Vietnamese in Paris. Though Saigon is even more febrile than it was in January, Mr. Agnew's mission there may be one only of

Raleigh and Greensboro in North Carolina, and Richmond and Norfolk in Virginia, were torn by dissension and recrimination last week, with some of the school districts rescheduling the opening of school to delay desegregation

MINNEAPOLIS—He is black and the campus New Left from which the state is 99 percent white. he draws his greatest support. He is an unknown challenging Minnesota's leading political figure. He has little organization and less money, and he is up against a man who has not been beaten here in 25 years.

For all these reasons and more, the odds against Earl Craig jr. beating Hubert H. Humphrey in the Sept. 15 Democratic senatorial primary are astronomical.

Nonetheless, the campaign of the 31-year-old lecturer in black political philosophy at the University of Minnesota is the most interesting in the state-because of the man himself, but even more because of his support.

"Twe visited three farm families in the past week who supported George Wallace last time and are voting for me this time," Craig said the other day. "Now, either those people aren't the racists we thought they were or they've all been struck colorblind. I they're just as tired as I am of the old politics and old politicians."

The kinship between the New Left and the Wallaceites has been commented on before. The University of Michigan Survey Research Center study of the 1988 election showed that significant numbers of pre-convention supporters of Sen. Eugene McCarthy voted for George Wallace in the general election, as a way of continning their protest.

Here in Minneapolis, Charles Stervig, a police detective with a Wallacette approach, was elected mayor last year our tional candidates put forward by the two parties.

There are 2,691 school districts in 11 Southern states with nearly half (1,213) located in Texas. According to figures released by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 353 districts are due to implement voluntary desegregation plans that have been approved by HEW. These districts are the following states: Arkansas, 51; Georgia, 103; Mississippi, 31; North Carolina, 29; South Carolina, 53; Florida, 18; Louisiana, 5; Tennessee, 19; Texas, 33; Virginia, 11.

up with it. The term stems from the Czech word lopata, which means shovel. A free translation of polopatismus, therefore, is shovelism.

What that means is that the people are having an overwhelming amount of propaganda, dogma, promises and boasts about intengible successes shoveled to them. They are being shovel-fed with the line of the Communist leadership which claims to have brought the nation out of chaos "with the timely help of our Soviet and Warsaw Pact allies." What is being shoveled to the citizens of Czechoslovakia is a barrage of charges against the reform movement of the former

ander Dubcek, which was crushed two years ago this month by the invading Soviet Union. The efforts of officialdom are aimed at destroying the image that grew up around Dubcek and the liberals who tried to give this country a more democratic and more humane communism. But at the same time the authoritles are trying to stir up enthusiasm trally-governed future—to eradicate the anathy that pervades the populace and especially to get the Industrial workers to get the country's stagnating economy rolling again.

Contradictions

Despite official claims to have increased industrial productivity, halted inflation and returned the country to normal, there is little evidence to back up the statistics that fill the pages of the Com-munist press and sparkle endlessly over television.

Contradictions abound by the shovelful. The press reports that in the Czech part of the federated republic industrial production for the first six months of this year has gone up more than seven percent over the same period last

If the figures are to be accepted it simply shows how bad things were last year after the Soviet occupation

Official statisticians concede that even today only 60 to 70 percent of the regular working time is being put to actual production.

This is till the crux of Czechoslovakia's problem. Despite all efforts at drumming up enthusiasm for the joy of producing for the homeland, the nation's workers are goofing off even more than is normal during these hot summer And while life goes on at its

It is the height of the melor season in Europe but there wa not a single melon at the stalls. Nor were there any salad green other than a few sprigs of parsie; and fresh dill.

Tomatoes, which mostly comfrom Bulgaria, were in short supply and of poor quality. The only thing the shopper:

could find at the stands were cabbages, carrots and cucumberscucumbers all over the place. "We call it the cucumber summer here in Prague," one housewife said after standing in line for more than an hour to get her daily supply of vegetables. The capital of the republic, noted for its Prague hams, had no ham for sale in the markets—only the tinned variety at the hard-cur-

Mr. Fish, designer of clothes for men, not believing that Wogs begin at Calais.

"Fashion, you see, is in the mind. You have to think differently before you can dress differently. By changing their clothes, people risk changing their whole lives and they are frightened."

Fashion as radical politics sounds even more extreme in-side his small shop with its delicately camp atmosphere, crammed with clothes labelled "Peculiar to Mr. Fish." It is relentiessly smart, full of rich young aristocrats, self-styled beautiful people and image-conscious show business person-

Mancroft and Peter Sellers' much-publicized ex-girl friend, drops in for a few hours a day to help serve customers. Com-poser Lionel Bart once came in dressed in his pajamas because he had got up in the morning and could not find a clean shirt to wear. As we talked, film director Roman Polanski wandered through. Fifteen years ago, Mr. Fish was an ill-educated 15-year-old from a poor part of London, working as a shop assistant and admiring the way bank clerks dressed. Now running a business with an annual furnover of some $600,000, he re-members the shrewd advice given him by another ragtrade entrepreneur who successfully crashed Britain's so-cial barriers: "My dear, you think these smart people want. your friendship for its ownsake. One day you will discovthat they are only after-

Says Mr. Fish: "I'm glad to be a part of the creative renaissance that makes London so exciting. People like Mick Jagger and John Lennon are the cream of the country and fashion, like rock music, communicates what is happening in society."

He talks on over hmch at Burke's, London's newest club for the young and wealthy. Where a simple spack of chees burgers and wine can cost $14 for two. Over the noise of a hysterical waiter (an American girl has found insects moving around in her salad and he, giggling madly, is telling her that they are all very small Mr. Fish says:

Fashion is important to me as a form of anarchy. The sage is, don't allow yourself to be told what to wear, or how to act, by others. If you do, the system will swal-

His great current success is shirts for the mildly uncon-ventional. They have wild designs of hummingbirds silk-screened on the back so that the timid can bide them under their jackets. He wears another of his new designs: a yellow shirt with brown edging at coller and cuffs to match a brown tie. He says: 'I had an offer to go to America and clean up there. But I'm not interested in making millions and retir ing at 35. Retiring to what? America has finally proved that materialism doesn't work. There, you are either part of the system or you are protest-ing about it. In Britain, it's possible to do both-and suc-

How the American Woman Sees Her Role

By George Gallup

DRINCETON, N.J., Aug. 28.-Like all mothers, I get fed up with being cooped up in the house. I'd probably even enjoy a part-time job, but I wouldn't change roles with my husband for one minute.

A Fatboro, Pa., mother of three small children talks about her role in life.

You hear a lot of talk these days about equality for women," she added. "Single girls may find some discrimination in the business world, but I'll bet most women are fairly satisfied with what they are doing.

She would probably win her bet, according to the results of a special Gallup survey just completed which focused on the attitudes of American women toward their role in life, interest

Two-thirds of American women, mothers included, believe they get as good a break in the world today as men do. However, among those who have attended college, from whose ranks the women's liberation movement has drawn much of its support. far fewer (53 percent) believe they get as good a break as men. Women are now organizing in city after city-publishing handbills, taking out full-page newspaper ads, picketing and threatening court suits. Today, the National Organization for Women (ROW) will lead a nationwide distaff strike for equality with men.

The feminists are protesting what they regard as "intolerable discrimination" against them in industry, government and the

Here are some of the other highlights of this Gallup survey: Among the two-thirds of American women (67 percent) who are presently not working in jobs outside the home, the weight of preference is not to work. Among those women who do crave outside employment (27 percent), most would choose a part-time

• Reasons cited by women not now working who want outside employment divide mainly between those who "need the money" and those who admit to being bored at home.

■ Although 65 percent of U.S. women believe they get as good break in life as men, a majority believe women do not have the same chance as men to become corporate executives. Among women in the higher educational brackets (those who have attended college) the overwhelming majority of 75 percent believe women are held back from top business positions because of their sex, while among those who have gone only to grade school, 36 percent

The survey was conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected sampling points July 10-12. Following are the questions asked of the 778 women interviewed. The results are shown by all women, women who have children under 21 and by the respondent's

Brussels Ballet

The 1970-71 season of the Théatre de la Monnaie in Brussels opens Sept. 8 to 16 with a program of the Ballet of the 20th century comprising "Bac-chanale" and "Mathilde," to music by Wagner, and "Seraitce la Mort?" to a score by Richard Strauss. Maurice Béjart's company will then give four programs, a total of eight ballets, on a one-week visit to Montreal (Sept. 21-27). A later trans-Atlantic tour will bring the company on its first visit to New York, where it will play from Jan. 25 to Feb. 14 at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, again with four programs of eight ballets ranging from the early "Sacre du Printemps" and "Symphonie pour un Homme Seul" to the recent "Messe pour le Temps Présent," "Actus Tragicus' and a new work to a Bach score.

What Makes Monte Carlo Run: Money

By Hebe Dorsey FONTE-CARLO, Aug. 26 -usons, the Americans stayed me and the British came

The drop in the New York ch market was responsible for ally more psychological than incial," said Bernard Weinwten, the Seventh Avenue amiacturer. "A lot of those mole haven't changed anyting in their way of life back me. But a man who's lost $1 illion on the stock market melow doesn't feel in the 100d for spending $50,000 on a Tonte Carlo jaunt. Many also it like staying closer to home

Actually, the American retreat as largely limited to the toute Carlo habitués, the big ... penders who used to come for he whole season. A large numer of Americans did coment only for a few days.

But the British were back. The English contingent thinned out when currency restrictions were imposed in 1967, dropping from 35 percent of the Monte Carlo clientele to 9 percent. Since restrictions were lifted last spring. all the big names, including Sir Graham and Lady Rowlanson ir Harold and Lady Samuel and Cecil Beaton, were here.

relations man for the SBM (Société des Bains de Mer). The Italians love Monte Carlo and there are more of them this season. They are elegant, colortradition. They are fierce gam-

ful and, unlike the other groups, belong to the jeunesse dorce blers and prefer to come here. because, as everyone knows, one doesn't like to gamble in one's

"They account for 80 percent of our gamblers," said Mr. Levrier. "It's scary, in a way, because we hate to think what would happen to our casino if something went wrong in Italy." The Italians also come to Monte Carlo because it is close to home and yet much more in-tion," said Guy Levrier, public.

"We have a house here and have been coming for years because it's an elegant place where you don't feel the holiday crush. Italian beaches have become like Coney Island," said Mrs. Alex Mann of Milan. "Also, it's the last place in the world where you can still feel La Belle Epoque. The jewelry one sees here is fabulous. Women can wear diamonds to the beach without it looking vulgar or in bad taste. Somehow, Monte Carlo can take it."

The French represent the smallest percentage. Those who do come usually own villas in the neighborhood and tend to

But all in all. Monte Carlo is doing all right. Henri, the bartender at the Hotel de Paris, is a busy as ever and said that the bar earnings were up 10 per cent over last year. All the rooms in town are booked solid and the casino (known as "the to the habitues) handles $200,000 every night.

The people who did come are living as high as usual. Oil baron Augustus Newman still has his yacht, The Southern chored in the Monte Carlo harbor. He uses it for cruise luncheons, taking friends to Portofino and back.

Art collector Patrick Lannan (who is on the board of ITT) has his private jet on hand too, for his next jump to Munich, where he wants to look at modern art with stockbroker Jerry Sperling.

The conversation is too much. Mr. Newman was saying quite seriously how his dog was, yes, much better, thank you, since he flew to London to get him that copper arthritis bracelet that all the Beautiful People are wearing nowadays.

But all that high living may take its toll. A couple of Miami men were spending their days playing gin rummy on the beach at $1 a point. Reportedly the high stakes led to one of them I played like you, I would have died years ago," the doctor told

Sometimes the defenders can make an accurate guess about the declarer's distribution. At other times they have no chance, as on the diagramed deal.

An opening bid of one diamond would seem automatic with South's hand, but he selected one club. This would be comprehensible if he had been playing a "canapé" sys-tem in which the longer suit is kept in reserve, but his choice was nonsystemic.

However, the next two actions by North-South were based on partnership under-standings that were explained to the opponents. The redouble did not necessarily show high-card strength - a subsequent raise in clubs, which was made on the next round, would show a redouble based on distributional support.

The cue-bid of two hearts was explained as a heart void, not necessarily showing extra strength, and from that point both sides bid vigorously, perhaps too vigorously.

When North-South reached five clubs it was certainly hard for East to know that his best action was to pass. He might have considered doubling instead of bidding five hearts, and would have been hurt to discover that five clubs could not be defeated.

East - West could have been in trouble in five hearts, but South came to his opponents' rescue with a bid of six clubs: He felt that the vulnerability was in his favor for a sacrifice, a slight misjudgment

West naturally doubled, for he had no wish to hear his partner bid any more hearts, and led the diamond ace. The declarer ruffed the opening lead in dummy and led a spade. NORTH man and Kingsley Amis may belong in the same review together if only because each, in his own way, has made such a singular contribution to the modern comic novel—Friedman with the black comedy of "Stern" and "A Mother's Kisses," Amis in "Lucky Jim" and a slew of others. But in "The Dick" and "The Green Man," each has left his old routines behind. And to tell the blunt truth of the matter, I read Mr. Friedman's novel fully expecting to devote this entire column to it, found myself both disappointed and without much to say, picked up "The Green Man" for a latenight browse (never in the past having been that great an Amis fan), and found it altogether spellbinding and impossible to stop reading even long after bedtime. So here we are with two wildly different sorts of books and not a shred of connective tissue.

Actually, it isn't that there's not much to say about Mr. Friedman's latest novel, it's more that it all got said, or thought, when his stage play, "Scuba Duba," first arrived. For there's really very little difference between the play and the novel, either in their themes or in the reactions they evoke.

In both we have heroes suffering comically from their own Jewishness, from the existence of the Negro race, from wives who have run off with blacks, from psychic ailments verging on the physical, and from a chronic indecisiveness as to whether to behave like grown men or charming but nasty little boys. In both we have incidentals like a daughter named Jamie and a black woman reputed to be named (joke) Eurethra. In both we are subjected to a relentless barrage of sick jokes (I hesitate, under the circumstances to call it black humor) mitigated presumably by the fact that it is never clear whether we are supposed to approve or disapprove of the people who make them.

And at both play and novel we find ourselves laughing ner-vously; guiltly wiping the sweat. from our palms; reassuring ourselves that we are, after all, supposed to be laughing at such wicked jokesters; and not with them, and remaining secretly unconvinced that this is so. Having sweated out "Scuba

Duba" and found it finally most umpleasant, I would have drop-ped "The Dick" after ten pages had it not been for the prose. Mr. Friedman brings an unflagging comic inventiveness to almost every line he writes. The formula may become predictable after a while, depending, as it invariably does, on incongruous juxtapositions of the sublime and the mundane, on little euphemisms running wild through his imagination (". . . it would take the colored school with its colored math at least three years to catch up to level. Still, maybe that w so had. Standing out, as obviously must . . . perhan would [come to] see all of difficulties as just a lot of colored math.") But the mutations he dreams up as finite, and one is drawn m sheer wonder.

Funny? It can be, cert; especially when one gets what Friedman has done the world of detectives and icide squads. But in the one comes away with the ing that one has just spen evening laughing it up chorus line of one-legged] ettes. And one turns with to the nearly timeworn lit devices from which Kir Amis has concected his h original yarn.

"The Green Man"—the refers to "a genuine coa-inn" of that name som miles from London, as we to something I mustn't rev is, of all things, a ghost And because its hero, the through whose eyes its st events unfold, is an alco suffering, perhaps, from DTs and from other page matic infirmitles—someon other words, whose percer one can scarcely trustparadoxically a highly cre and nervous-making ghost :

Perhaps its most sur charm lies in the metho which Amis solves the problem posed by such This is that eventually e the monsters that appea them must be explained as products of a fevered min which case the suspense li how adroitly the author juggle his psyches, or the s natural must be establishe real and then zapped by de ranging from silver spike crucifixes, in which case the nouement can lapse into por mechanics. Miro Mural: Jigsaw Puzzle of the Mind

By Richard Eder

GALLIFA, Spain (NYT).—In the hills 30 miles above Barcelona, work is being completed on a 30-ton mural designed by Joan Miro and fashioned Spain's master ceramist, Joseph Llorens Artigas.

In a basement kiln 200 tiles with a deep garnet glaze were cooling. A huge, whale-shaped kiln in the cypress-fringed garden was being prepared for tiles with a dark blue glaze. Part of the mural lies packed in wooden crates and part is spread out on the floor of an outbuilding. When assembled and hung to cover one side of Barcelona's air terminal it will be 165 feet long and 35 feet high. Barcelona museum officials say it will be the largest tile mural in the world. In

He is assisted by a young Frenchman who is studying with him, and sometimes by his son, a sculptor, who lives in Paris.

"I am old, and when there is money it's better if my son comes and helps me," said Llorens. "When there is no money, of course, then I am less old." He is 78 but looks 20 years younger. When they were boys, he and Miro, 77, studied drawing in Barcelona under the same teacher, and they have been close friends and frequent collaborators ever

Liorens's home and workshop are in a 17th-century farmhouse outside the village of Gallifa, which despite its spectacular hill setting has dwindled to seven families. "There are so few now that they had to make me deputy mayor," said Llorens. First deputy mayor,

The mural will be a pattern of abstract shapes in deep, glowing colors. Asked if Miro had given him a painting to work from, Llorens looked pained.

"We don't work that way," he said. "Miro would come out here and make sketches with a pencil and tell me the colors he wanted, and I would tell him where he was wrong, and he would come back and look at the first batches of tiles and tell me where I was wrong. Now he knows things are going well, and he hasn't come out for a while."

So until it is finally assembled and hung, the mural exists as crates and crates of jigsaw puzzle pieces whose eventual pattern is only in the minds of the painters and the potter.

Do any of As a matter of fact, they do. tell it," says Ai Hix from London, "17th-century gentlemen, on being presented with a particularly stiff bill, would often moan, 'Oh no, no, no!' But, being gentlemen, they would pay up nevertheless which gave rise to the saying later distorted, 'Paying through their no's . . . Apropos of nothing, a shaggy headline from a Michigan weekly, as quoted by Marc Raizman, of Zurich: "Stars Useful in Two-Story House."

Left over from the days of the spoonerisms is diebard Mark Clifton, of Paris, whose original aberration goes some thing like this:

In one of those new Florida subdivisions hard by the Everglades lived an engineer with his wife and toddling baby boy. One night after cocktails, the wife went out into the back garden to bring baby in fromhis playpen. Baby had disappeared. A thorough and frantic search through swamp ensued, all in vain. Not a clue was found, nor even a ransom note, though there were rumors among the locals that a gigantic shiny bird had been seen in the area chawing on what looked mighty like a baby boy. As a last resort, Seminole Joe, the swamp guide, was hired by the family. Joe disappeared into the morass for several days, armed with but a bow and arrow, and sure enough, he returned with baby in tow, scratched, wet but nonetheless healthy. "How? Why?" asked the overjoyed parents of Seminole Joe. "By the might." said the taciturn guide, "of the Silvery Loon." Oh well . . .

McLuhan Connects Violence to Transistor Radio

By Edward Cowan

TORONTO. Aug. 26 (NYT).-After an absence of 15 months, Marshall McLuhan, the communications expert whom some people can't understand, reappeared on Canadian television Monday night and offered McLuhanesque observations about tribal violence. Freud, expressways, dropping out and former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Mr. McLuhan, whose theories about the impact of electronic communications have gained him world renown, blamed "tribal violence" in Africa and the Middle East on 'free transistor radios." which he said the United Nations was distributing "in all the backward countries of the world."

"The effect is to release enormous tribal violence because it intensifies all the activity of their ear culture. which is the culture by which they live already," he said. Likening the radios to "giving them very high-powered booze," Mr. McLuhan said, "tribal societies can't touch alcohol because they already are so keved up as communities, as tribal groups, that the sort of increased social activity that comes from alcohol is to them just poison."

Mr. McLuhan, 59, director of the Center for Culture and Technology at the University of Toronto, delivered himself of opinions on a variety of topics in a half-hour interview with Ed Fitzgerald on the Canadian Broadcasting Corpo-

Freud, he said, "has disappeared." Although "not obso-lete," Mr. McLuhan elaborated, the Viennese psychologist has become "a useless stage property because the new family is a group entity" and "his psychology was for private problems. The private family in the sense of mere nuclear bomb, pop and the kids is
